COLLAPSE OF BULL CAMPAIGN.

It Was Looked for, But Was Not Expected All at Once-John H. Inman Sald to Have Made Three Hundred Thousand Dollars.

NEW YORK, October 21 .- Cotton prices on the New York Cotton Exchange this morning opened over 39 points below Saturday's official closing figures. The decline was accompanied by great excitement. January future opened at against 8.66 at Saturday's close. Wednesday last the same future sold at 9.44, or 90 points above to-day's open-

Liverpool market of 100711-61. The decline, as a whole, however, was occasioned by the reported collapse of the bull campaign, which has been engineered from New Orleans for several months The New Orleans bull clique was last week reported to be liquidating its holdings of cotton, and this quickened Business was very heavy this morning, and the fluctuations were violent. Within thirty seconds the market moved 5 points. January, which had opened at 8.51, railied to 8.65, and then weakened again, with quick railies, and recovered during the first hour. The sales on the opening call were on an enormous scale.

In the early afternoon January cotton tonuched $.7. This was a decline of 117 points from Wednesday, or equivalent to $5.80 a bale. In the early afternoon, however, conservative traders were counselling that there should be a reaction, or serious results might follow. Some promi-nent operators are said to have come in as buyers. A New Orleans dispatch reported the failure of Emmett & Buesch, a cotton-house there.

Up to 1 o'clock the sales on the New FRINCE EDWARD AROUS

York Exchange aggregated 600,000 bales— the largest on record. At 1:45 January's price was 8.46.

THE ONE TOPIC.

The tremendous break in cotton and the wild, unprecedented scenes on the floor of the Cotton Exchange were the talk of the street. Stock operators left their favorite speculative commodities to discuss cotton and its downward career.

One of the best-known cotton brokers One of the best-known cotton brokers in the city, when asked to give an opinion on the market, said hurriedly: "The break had to come and was looked for, but it was not expected all at once. The truth is that the reaction in cotton is taking place in days instead of months. This tremendous drop should have extended over two months. We are doing the business of liquidating in three days. The market, in consequence, is in a con-the business of liquidating in three days. The market, in consequence, is in a condition little short of a panic, and real values are not considered."

When prices reached what appeared to be the bottom John H. Inman, who sold 25,000 hales of January at 9.31 last week, became a bull and bought back what he had sold at 1 cent less. His profits are reported enormous on the transaction, He is said to have cleared over $200,000 on the drop in cotton in the past four days. the drop in cotton in the past four days.

There was a report late to-day that the Governors of the Cotton Exchange were investigating reports that several brokers made sales on the curb after the close Saturday, and that they would be called to account for it.

At 2 o'clock the sales of cotton amount-ed to over $20,000 bales, and speculation was still very heavy.

LEESBURG, VA., October 21.-(Special.)-The reunion here to-day of the survivors of the Eighth Virginia (General Hunton's old regiment) under the auspices of Clinton Hatcher Camp, Confederate Veterans, Colonel E. V. White commander, was one of marked interest commander, was one of marked interest to all. From early morning till less, when the train hearing the speakers of the occasion arrived, crowds came pouring in from all quarters. When the train stopped at the depot the gallant survivors were drawn up in line to greet their oid commander. General House their oid commander, General Hunton. The speakers were General Hunton, General Payne, Attorney-General Scott, and Eppa Hunton, Jr.

GREETING GENERAL HUNTON. When General Hunton appeared he was greeted with cheer after cheer in the old Confederate style. The veterans, numbering about one hundred, the sole survivors of the gallant Eighth, then escorted the distinguished visitors to the speakers' stand, on the portice of the Leesburg Inn, fronting on the court-house yard. This portice was literally packed with people. The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. J. W. Grubb, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, General Hunton was presented by Capthe Methodist Episcopal Cartain South General Hunton was presented by Cap-tain Tyler, and spoke a short while, be-ing interrupted several times by vocife-rous applause. He was followed by Eppa Hunton, Jr., in a stirring address, Eppa Hunton, Jr., in a surring address. General Payne was then called, and he in turn was given a grand ovation by the enthusiastic crowd. Major R. Taylor Scott next held the attention of the audience in an eloquent effort, which was loudly applauded.

HUNTON AGAIN. Intermission was then declared for din-ner, and after the intermission General Hunton again stirred the hear's of the assemblage by his eloquent words for an hour.

Eppa Hunton, Jr., said in his speech:
"I wish to proclaim this truth—that our fathers fought this war that we, their South Carolina, vice E. W. Gibson.

sons and descendants, might escape it, and have peace, liberty, and freedom; that the strusgle which was ingvitable might be behind us, and that they alone should risk the consequence of this appeal to the God of battle. Was ever human love greater than this, or sacrifice more sublime? We are again citizens of a common country, and good citizens, too, but that citizenship has not been purchased at the price of humiliation and fawning." The meeting here adjourned, and all repaired to the famous battle-field of Ball's Bluff, to find, as some one facetiously put it, his particular stump or tree that was his pet in the battle. The battletorn Confederate flag floated proudly over the old veterans during the day, as it had in by-gone days.

a rich, full and well cultivated tenor voice, was eminently satisfactory, and Mr. Frederick Reddell, baritone, sang acceptably, and was encored.

The Tuxedo Concert Orchestra, which The Tuxedo Concert Orchestra, which appeared here last week in connection with the Cora Van Tassell organization—of which it was the sole redeeming feature—gave a concert at the St. Clair Hotel last high hore. ture—gave a concert at the St. Clair Hotel last night before a large audience. The club has a membership or nve, and gives a very interesting and creditable perform-ance. They will give a benefit concert at the Theatre Friday avening. This ance. They will give a benefit concert at the Theatre Friday evening. This course is rendered necessary from the fact that the Van Tassell company fell by the wayside in this city, and the orehestra was left without funds to settle their hotei bills or pay railroad fares to their re-spective homes.

Frederick Warde begins his engagement at the Mozart Academy to-night with a performance of "The Mountebank," which is almost a novelty to most theatre-goers. as Mr. Warde is the only actor who makes it a specialty, and it is five years since he last presented it here. For its production this season special scenery has been prepared for each act, as well as the entire mountings and accessories, and the play has received added attraction from the introduction of musical numbers, which are rendered by the double quartette of vocalists who form a portion of Mr. Warde's company.

A special matinee will be given "The Lion's Mouth" as the at row with "The Lion's Mouth" as the attraction, and Mr. Warde's engagement will close to-morrow night with a production of his new play, "Runnymede;
or, Robin Hood and His Merrie Men."
Gilmore's Famous Band will return to absence, and appear in afternoon and evening concerts at the Academy of Music. Naturally, the people here, as elsewhere, will wonder, perhaps, if it is the same Glimore's as of old. It is, and it tan't. It is in the sense that there are many, perhaps twenty-five or thirty, of the old band at present with it, but there are twenty more of younger - blood artists also with it. It is not, in the sense that under Victor Herbert's scholarly direction the organization is now a magnificent body of trained instrumentalists whose playing, in technical skill and artistic effects, resembles more that of the great orchestras. There is nothing of the "band" about it. No clap-tray of anvils, or cannon, or that sort of thing, which may do for an alle gorical monstrosity, but is totally out of place in a concert-room. Glimore's is now upon a plane that is equal to the grand concert standard only. Its performances are refined, brilliant, and musical but delivered with the nuance, finish and effect of orchestral requirements, Two ex-ceedingly bright and notable programmes are provided for Thursday. The soloists are: Victor Herbert, violoncello; H. L. Clarke, cornet; Ernest H. Clarke, trom-bone; Signor de Carlo, piccolo; Aldis J. Gery, autoharp, and the distinguished operatic soprano, Miss Ida Klein, prima Victor Herbert, violoncello; H. L.
